Sprouted brown rice sake

Germinated brown rice wine made from completely unshaven germinated brown rice uses FABALA's technology to harmonize oil and water without intermediates

FABALA's sprouted brown rice wine contains nearly 3 times more amino acids than regular alcoholic beverages. The reason is that it is based on FABALA's technology that connects oil and water without intermediaries so it further brings out the goodness of the ingredients and is full of nutrients. The results of a company analysis also showed that FABALA's sprouted brown rice wine has a significantly higher amino acid content compared to general Japanese sake's. FABALA's sprouted brown rice wine compared to the amino acid content of Japanese sake is as follows: Alanine (alanine aminotransferase) is 17.5 times higher glutamate is 11.1 times higher, and other amino acids and essential amino acids also have a considerable higher content (brewery manufacturer survey)
